

Eurasian
Research Bulletin

The role and importance of political parties in the social, political, and spiritual life of society

Bozorboyev Eldorbek

Department of Political Science at the Faculty of International Journalism of the State University of World Languages in Uzbekistan
3rd year student

ABSTRACT

This article examines the role and importance of political parties in the socio-political and spiritual life of society. Political parties are institutions that play an important role in forming political views in society, participating in state administration, and protecting the interests of the people. The article analyzes the mediating functions of political parties between the state and citizens, their influence on social and economic processes in society, as well as the role of parties in the development of political culture.

Keywords:

Socio-political life of society, spiritual life, political parties, state administration, political culture, citizen participation, social institutions, democratic processes.

LOG IN

Political parties are an integral part of the socio-political and spiritual life of society and play an important role in the development of democratic systems. They participate in public administration and political processes and serve to represent, protect and implement the interests of citizens. Through political parties, different social groups in society make their voices heard, their demands and needs are directed towards public policy. These processes further expand the role of political parties in society and show their role in ensuring political and economic stability. The importance of political parties is great not only in participating in public policy, but also in shaping the political culture in society. They help to improve the political knowledge and skills of citizens, and contribute to the strengthening of social order. Therefore, political parties play a key role not only in the management of state policy, but also in the spiritual life of society.

This article analyzes the role and significance of political parties in the socio-political and spiritual life of society, shows their role in the development of democratic processes, and highlights the tasks of citizen participation and public administration.

NATIJARLAR.

A number of important conclusions can be drawn by examining the role and significance of political parties in the socio-political and spiritual life of society. Political parties function not only as one of the main components of the public administration system, but also as an integral institution of a democratic society. They are a means activating citizens' participation in social and political life and play a crucial role in expressing and defending people's political views and influencing public policy. Political parties act as a bridge between the state and citizens, bringing citizens' demands and needs to the level of politics.

First, political parties play an invaluable role in ensuring social stability in society. They provide an opportunity to resolve conflicts in society through political processes, trying to harmonize the interests of different social groups. Political parties participate in the process of setting public policy, thereby contributing to the maintenance of social security and stability. As a result, the role of political parties in eliminating social inequalities, protests or conflicts in society increases. They are a means of communication between citizens and the state, creating opportunities for open and transparent discussion of political issues in society.

Second, political parties also play an important role in shaping the political culture of a society. They call citizens to be politically active, ensure their participation in public administration and contribute to democratic processes. The development of political culture is one of the main factors ensuring political stability in society, and the role of political parties in this process is invaluable. Parties increase citizens' political knowledge through political education, influence them in political decision-making and encourage their active participation in the political process. In the development of political culture, the task of the parties is not only to increase the political activity of citizens, but also to promote proper decision-making in society.

Thirdly, through political parties, the spiritual life in society is also formed and developed. Political parties play an important role in the promotion of moral values and the development of moral aspects of citizens. Spirituality manifests itself as the basis of political processes, as a force that enhances social cooperation in society and strengthens national unity. Political parties develop many political and social programs to ensure the moral stability of society. Through these programs, the parties contribute to the development of national consciousness, awareness and elevation of national self-identity.

Fourth, the influence of political parties on economic processes is also noteworthy. Political parties, through their programs, participate in the formation of economic policy and protect the socio-economic interests of citizens.

Economic development has become an integral part of the activities of political parties, which aim to achieve the general welfare of society by shaping and influencing state economic policy. Political parties contribute to reducing economic inequality in society by controlling economic processes, support political and economic reforms being carried out by the state to ensure economic growth.

Political parties are directly involved in the implementation of various political and social reforms in society, play an important role in making practical political decisions through state bodies. They play a decisive role in protecting the democratic rights and freedoms of people, supporting and monitoring reforms aimed at building a just society. Therefore, the analysis of the role of political parties in the political processes of society allows us to understand their importance in a democratic society.

In conclusion, it can be said that political parties play an important role not only in public administration but in all sectors of society. They are directly involved in ensuring social stability, protecting the rights and interests of citizens, developing a political culture, participating in their direct participation in the political, economic and spiritual life of society. At the same time, political parties play an important role in the processes of socio-economic development, contribute to strengthening democratic values and ensure social stability in society. Conducting a broader study of the role and significance of political parties in the life of society, an in-depth study of the development processes of this institution will help make democratic systems more stable and effective.

MUHOKAMA.

The role and significance of political parties in the socio-political and spiritual life of society is a multifaceted and complex process, and their activities play a decisive role in establishing the link between the state and society. Political parties represent the interests of different segments of society and reflect their voice in the political process. This discussion is aimed at conducting an in-depth analysis of the various functions of political parties, their role in society, and their influence on the public administration system.

First, political parties bring together different social groups in society and bring their interests into the political arena. In a democratic system, political parties represent the needs of different classes, social strata, and national groups, helping to integrate them into the system of public administration. In this way, parties encourage social segments of society to actively participate in political life and help ensure political stability and social justice.

Second, political parties play an important role in the formation of state policy. They take an active part in political decision-making by introducing their representatives into public authorities through elections. In this process, the parties will be able to implement their programs, protect the socio-economic and political interests of people. Programs and platforms developed by political parties determine the direction of development of society, which has great importance in public administration.

Thirdly, political parties also play an important role in the development of political culture in society. Political culture is the conscious and active attitude of members of society to the state and the political process. Political parties in this regard serve to involve citizens in the political process, increase political participation and expand political education. They shape the political consciousness of citizens through political education and encourage them to actively participate in the democratic process.

Fourth, political parties have an important role to play in ensuring social justice. They make a great contribution to the protection of the rights and interests of citizens, the representation of the interests of poor and socially weak groups. One of the main goals of political parties is to ensure social equality and justice in society. In this way, they seek to ensure the social stability and advancement of the society.

Fifth, political parties are the driving force behind political and social reforms. Through their programs, they encourage the implementation of reforms aimed at updating the political system, reforming public administration and solving various problems in society. Political parties serve to accelerate changes in society by influencing all spheres of public policy.

Sixth, the role of political parties as a link between the state and citizens is significant. They act as a bridge in bringing the demands and needs of citizens in society to the state level, including them in the political decision-making process. Thus, the political parties provide for the political dialogue between people and the state and contribute to the development of democratic governance.

Seventh, political parties also play an important role in promoting spiritual values in society. They seek to ensure moral stability in society by developing programs that ensure the moral and spiritual development of citizens. Spiritual values are a pressing issue for political parties, not only nationally, but also globally, as they strengthen the unity among citizens.

Eighth, political parties are the guarantors of social stability. Through them, political contradictions and conflicts in society are regulated, which is important for maintaining the stability of the political system. Political stability is strengthened through active participation of citizens in political life and expression of their interests, which ensures the general welfare in society.

Ninth, political parties contribute to socio-economic development. Through their programs, they serve to grow the economy, create new jobs, and ensure economic equity. Political parties take an active part in shaping the economic policy of the state, seeking to ensure economic stability and prosperity in society.

When we talk about the political importance of parties, we can mainly refer to their participation in the formation of direct power, the composition of state representative bodies. It's a suffocating notion with an election. The fact that our national legislation strictly stipulates that candidates for deputies in the upcoming elections should be nominated only by political parties gives each party great rights and opportunities, but also imposes a high responsibility. The newly adopted Electoral Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan creates more opportunities in this area. Uzavtosanoat to be transformed¹ Because the holding of elections on the basis of the principles of multi-party and alternative, transparency and transparency, in accordance with the democratic standards generally recognized in the world largely depends on the thorough preparation of political parties for this process and their active participation in them with thought-out new ideas, goals and programs. The political importance of a political party is manifested directly in the process of elections and in the adoption of laws in the chambers of the Oliy Majlis. And this will serve the democratic development of our country, as well as the perfection of the formation of a free civil society. As President Shavkat Mirziyoyev put it: "The only common goal uniting all compatriots, regardless of party affiliation, is our vibrant Uzbekistan, its great future. It is this purpose that encourages all of us to serve our country faithfully."²

In general, great attention is paid to bringing the younger generation to a fully mature, highly spiritual, independent and free-thinking society, thoroughly mastered the achievements of modern science, as well as to train young people with high spirituality and highly qualified personnel, as well as to educate them in the spirit of respect for the Motherland. In the short period since independence of our state, it is worth being proud of the large-scale work carried out in the field of youth policy and their positive results. As a result of effective activities carried out in Uzbekistan youth policy, the youth of Uzbekistan also gain great achievements in the world arena. This is manifested in the achievements of young people in the fields of economy, politics, sports, spirituality, science. However, in the science of the country, the history of the formation, development and activities of youth organizations has not been separately studied. In our opinion, the study of the activities of youth organizations in Uzbekistan in an interdisciplinary direction separately and according to their general features plays an important role in identifying the problems they face, solving them. These issues are among the actual problems facing the social sciences such as history, sociology, political science, law, pedagogy, etc. Identification of youth problems and solutions to them is an important guarantee of sustainable development of the country.

In conclusion, we can say that the role and importance of political parties in society is incredibly important and comprehensive. They take an active part in the political, social and economic life of society, and play a crucial role in the development of democratic processes, ensuring social stability and promotion of spiritual values. Therefore, a more in-depth study and analysis of the activities of political parties is important in making democratic systems more effective and stable.

XULOSA.

Political parties play an important role in the socio-political and spiritual life of society. They are involved not only in forming the government, but also in involving citizens in the political process. Political parties are one of the main components of democratic systems, through which the political aspirations of the population are expressed and implemented. Political parties play an important role in ensuring social stability and protecting the interests of various social groups in society, as well as in the development of political culture among citizens. They stimulate social development by introducing new ideas and innovations. It is also possible for political parties to influence their voters and involve them in the political process. However, the ineffectiveness of political parties or their internal conflicts, as well as weak relations with the public, can be an obstacle to changing socio-political processes. These circumstances will certainly adversely affect the socio-political development of society.

Competition and cooperation of political parties contributes to the development of the political environment in society, the activation of citizens and the strengthening of democratic values.

¹ Meeting of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev with the leaders of political parties operating in Uzbekistan August 22, 2019 // <https://www.uzavtoyul.uz/uz>

² Meeting of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev with the leaders of political parties operating in Uzbekistan August 22, 2019 // <https://www.uzavtoyul.uz/uz>

Therefore, it is important for political parties to be able to properly and effectively carry out their tasks related to social and political life in society.

In the future, the development of political parties and their role in socio-political processes will become even more important. In this process, their innovative ideas, strategies and political activities are expected to serve the socio-economic development of the society. Correct understanding of the role of political parties in the socio-political life of society and their effective management is one of the main conditions for strengthening the democratic order.

In general, political parties are important institutions functioning in all spheres of society, and their role is not limited to controlling the political, economic and spiritual processes. They perform such important tasks as strengthening democratic principles in society, ensuring social stability, and increasing the state's position in the international arena. Therefore, the role and significance of political parties in the life of society has always been highly appreciated and special attention should be paid to their development.

LITERARY ROLE

1. Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan "On Political Parties" // <https://lex.uz/acts/-54191>
2. Abu Nasr Forabi. Fossil city of people. Tashkent: Fan, 1993. – 180 p.
3. Almontayev M. Political parties: role and role. Tashkent: Uzbekistan, 2005. – 250 b.
4. Boboev H. The role of political parties in society. Tashkent: 2010. - 312 b.
5. Duey John. Freedom and culture. Tashkent: Sharq, 1997. - 350 b.
6. Fedorov V.A. Political systems: theory and practice. Tashkent: New Century, 2002. - 315 p.
7. Hobbs T. Leviathan, or the Essence, Forms, and Authority of Church and the Civil State. Tashkent: New Century Generation, 2001. - 460 b.
8. Habibullayev Sh. Political parties and social development. Tashkent: New Century Generation, 2008. - 278 p.
9. <https://yuz.uz/uz/news/nodavlat-notijorat-tashkilotlarini-davlat-tomonidan-qollabquvvatlashning-yangicha-mexanizmi-yaratilmoqda>
10. Jumanazarov A. Understanding of the political system and the role of parties. Tashkent: Fan, 2015. – 320 p.
11. Carl Popper. The open society and its enemies. Tashkent: Uzbekistan, 2003. – 520 b.
12. Mirziyoyev Sh.M. New Uzbekistan - the world of political and social reforms. Tashkent: Uzbekistan, 2020. – 280 p.
13. Nazarbayev N.A. State-building and national revival in the XXI century. Tashkent: Science and Technology, 2011. – 230 p.
14. O'zLiDeP partiya ustavi // <https://uzlidep.uz/charter-of-the-party>
15. Address of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Sh. Mirziyoyev to the Oliy Majlis, January 6, 2021. <https://uzlidep.uz/uz/news-of-uzbekistan/7998>
16. Meeting of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev with the leaders of political parties operating in Uzbekistan August 22, 2019 // <https://www.uzavtoyul.uz/uz>
17. Sharipov O. Democracy and political parties: national and world experience. Tashkent: Justice, 2018. – 205 b. Yuldoshev I. Development and significance of political parties in Uzbekistan. Tashkent: Uzbekistan, 2021. - 410 b.
18. Turayev Sh. The role of political parties in ensuring political stability in society. Karshi: Karshi State University Press, 2016. - 190 p.
19. Kh.T. Odilkariev, D.Kh. Razzakov "Political science" .: Tashkent – 2012
20. Huntington S. Clash of Civilizations and the New World Order. Tashkent: Adalik Publ., 2003. – 400 b.