ABSTRACT

More and more of our young people are growing up in our society and contributing to the development of our country. The role of the family is very important for our young people to get a proper education, to live a happy life and achieve a lot. In this article, I talked about the role of the family, the role of parents, the importance of raising a child, the role of peace and tranquility in the family and of course, the upbringing of a child who is a mirror of the parents. After all, every young generation has a right to be happy.

We believe that a person's character, manners, appearance, attitude to people, education are different from others. Everyone has their own inner world, thoughts, worldview, social status. The role of the family is important for a person's upbringing, education, development and development in the future. Throughout our lives, we see, encounter and witness the lifestyles of different families, both materially and spiritually. There is a saying among our people: "Family is sacred, family is sacred." Divorce, war and conflict are on the rise in many families today. Many children are brought up in orphanages, far away from parental love, upbringing and of course, parental love. Isn't it the parents who are to blame? Don't parents need to be mirrors and role models for their children? How many families will live happily if the number of divorces is reduced if peace and tranquility prevail in the family.

The First President of the Republic of Uzbekistan I.A.Karimov spoke about the role of the family in society: "Speaking of the family, we must first acknowledge that the family is an educational center that ensures the eternity of life, the continuity of generations, the preservation of our sacred traditions, as well as a direct impact on the growth of future generations" they said.

The problem for many young people today is illiteracy, ignorance, unemployment. This is due to the indifference of parents to their children. It is necessary to pay attention to the education of the child from an early age. Some parents spend little time with their children and do not know what their children are doing. Teaching a child to walk and talk for the first time from an early age is the first duty of a parent. We know that in our country there are many "nursing homes" and on the streets - children and women in need of bread. What is the reason for this?

Why don't they have their own homes, their own children, their own parents? Come to think of it, they have family members, but they have given up on each other, the lack of interest and the fact that children also go astray is due to a lack of interest in knowledge. When we ask people in a nursing home, "Who brought you here?", They answer that my son or daughter left me here. Are children so ruthless, so cruel and so unscrupulous as to abandon their parents? There are so many children who need parental love and love. But it's not just children who are to blame.

This is because the proper upbringing of children during their youth is neglected, neglected and neglected by the child, leaving the child's upbringing to the teacher. If we say that children are like a pot, it is the work of this potter to mold this pot and decorate it with patterns. It is expedient for us to liken the potter to his parents. How a child enters life for the first time, how he thinks, how he learns, depends on the upbringing from childhood and is closely intertwined. The first problem is to force the child to a profession, to engage the child in something he is not interested in. Nowadays, some young people go from unemployment to various ways to earn money and even spend their lives in prisons from a young age.

I can say without fear that such a young generation will not be inferior to anyone if parents give their children from an early age to the clubs they are interested in, direct them to the right knowledge, are interested in learning and are interested in becoming good professionals in the future.

Parents need to teach young people growing up in every family how sacred the family is and how important educated people are to society. In some families, children grow up to be unkind to their father or mother and do not tell their parents any thoughts or plans after adolescence.

The parents, of course, are to blame. Because the child told his parents about his thoughts, dreams and problems from an early age, but the parents were indifferent, indifferent, did not listen to the child or did not take the time to listen to the child's words. The whole internal and external environment of the family affects the child, makes him depressed and makes him reluctant to talk to his parents.

A small percentage of parents beat their children to intimidate them into doing what they are told to do and doing things in their place. A child grows up with fear and panic from a young age. And for some as a baby gets older, he or she will outgrow this. For example, I have witnessed changes in speech, inability to add words and more pauses between each word. It is necessary to develop the child as a person who can think in a healthy, correct way, to develop the child's speech, to teach the child to express himself from an early age. We know that in family upbringing, the culture of speech should be formed and gradually developed from the moment the child's language emerges.

To do this, the child should be able to pronounce the words correctly, connect meaningful words and read age-appropriate books to enrich the speech, tell the meaning of the book he is reading, positive and it is necessary to pay great attention to independent expression of negative images, that is, to combine moral education with mental education, to read fairy tales, to talk more with the child, to answer the questions thoughtfully, to the child to teach the culture of speech from an early age, the etiquette of conversation, reading books to enrich vocabulary, memorizing poems. It is known that the more poems a person memorizes, the stronger his memory will be. The opportunities and conditions provided to the younger generation in our country are developing day by day.

Every year there are competitions and exams for talented, intelligent and well-educated young people in the Presidential schools and many young people are studying with high results with their intelligence.

I believe that the role of the family is important in educating the young people of our country, that every young generation living in our country should raise the flag of our country to the highest heights and of course, live a happy life. I want parents in my community to take care of their children, to love and caress them. Parents and young people need to be friends with each other. A healthy family environment, humane and humane relations have a positive effect on the child's spiritual world.

Good parental relations, kindness, care help to properly form the relationship of children in the family. The reputation of each parent in a sense depends on the maturity of their children.

Therefore, only a nation that is committed to strengthening the family and keeping its descendants clean will have a bright future. I want and believe that every parent in our society should love and care for their children and that children should be valued by their parents.

"Our people have long considered the family sacred. When the family is harmonious and harmonious, peace and harmony will be achieved in the society, and peace and stability will prevail in the state. The well-being of the family is the basis of national well-being." (I.A.Karimov)
