Corruption is an important problem, especially for countries in economic transition, and Uzbekistan is no exception.

Corruption is ultimately conciliatory. It is constantly changing, changing and improving. Confidentiality is its main feature. That is why R. Zufarov emphasizes that there is no complete or at least representative information about this case, and the guilty people who are being tried in criminal courts are only a handful of them, only one or two of them. is assigned. The high level of confidentiality can be explained by both objective and subjective reasons.

Based on the above, we can identify the main efforts of states to prevent and curb corruption, which include: active international cooperation; develop and implement national anti-corruption strategies; Adoption of relevant laws aimed at preventing and reducing corruption; expression of political will in recognizing corruption; regular monitoring; establishing and adopting moral standards and moral benchmarks; better selection of personnel for the civil service; ensuring the quality of order and discipline; active implementation of legal measures in the fight against corruption; ensuring transparency in the activities of government agencies and civil servants; openness and honesty; cooperating with non-governmental non-profit organizations, mass media and television and other public organizations.

The main factors contributing to corruption were the underdevelopment of civil society and the weak public oversight of officials. The results of a comprehensive study of a number of areas and social strata in all regions of the country, the relationship between people of different ages and genders, the systematic measures taken at the initiative of our President to combat corruption are deeply encouraging to our people. It should be noted that today Uzbekistan has its own path in the field of economic and social development, as well as in the field of spiritual and educational development. We see this peculiarity in the relationship with the law and the rule of law, along with many other values. That is, achieving equality of members of society on the basis of the rule of law is our main noble goal. True development and enlightenment open up even greater opportunities for the younger generation to reach maturity.

Our efforts to analyze such a big and urgent problem as corruption, so that we can be good, so that our words from different podiums do not contradict our deeds, our country is open and self-sacrificing and self-sacrificing.

Our task is to conduct a scientific-theoretical and informational analysis of the current problems of our time, such as corruption. Life shows corruption:

1. Money laundering business.
2. Terrorism.
3. Theft of works of art and cultural objects.
4. Theft of intellectual property.
5. Illegal arms trade.
6. Hijacking.
7. Piracy.
8. Seizure of land vehicles, including the use of force and threats with the use of force.
9. Insurance fraud.
10. Computer crime.
11. Environmental crimes.
12. Human trafficking.
13. Illicit drug trafficking.
15. False bankruptcy.
16. Joining a legitimate business and other crimes.

The internationally recognized tendencies, common features and processes of democratization and objective legitimacy of society are not realized by themselves, but they are realized through the policy of certain states and states. Thus, the scale, quality and effectiveness of democratic changes in society depend primarily on economic and political influence.

The above was announced by the First President of the Republic of Uzbekistan I.A. In Karimov's book "Uzbekistan on the Threshold of the 21st Century: Threats to Security, Conditions of Stability, and Guarantees of Development," in the "Corruption and Crime" chapter, the problem we are researching is that security and the evolutionary nature of our society are at stake.

In the national legislation, the process of democratic reconstruction takes place, first of all, through the formation of the rule of law and civil society. For this reason, the concepts of "rule of law", "civil society", "corruption", "official", "public official" and others are important components of society. Observing the need to establish the rule of law when thinking about the formation of society is of great practical importance in theory.

In short, the younger generation is the backbone of our future, our nation. Each of us has a responsibility to make sure that they grow up to be well-rounded adults.

Therefore, not only the responsible organizations, but also the representatives of the general public, that is, you, all of us, must work together. Only then will we achieve our goals, and only then will we be able to make a significant contribution to the development of our children and brothers and sisters into the perfect human being we dream of.
